Recent Highlights

- In June 2008, Mechel announced that a groundbreaking ceremony marking the commencement of railroad construction was held at the 60th kilometer landmark of Verhny Ulak Station of the Baikal-Amur Mainline together with Transstroy Engineering Corporation ZAO. This spur-track will connect the Elga deposit with the Baikal-Amur Mainline. The total length of the railroad will be approximately 315 kilometers. The railroad s design includes approximately 420 engineering structures, including 194 bridges. The railroad s throughput capacity after completion of all construction stages will be approximately 25.0-30.0 million tonnes annually. Commissioning of the railroad for permanent operations is expected to commence before September 30, 2010.
- In July 2008, Mechel announced the signing of a contract between its Chelyabinsk Metallurgical Plant OAO (CMP) subsidiary and Danieli to supply technology and equipment to construct a rail and structural steel mill at CMP. The mill s capabilities will enable low cost production of high quality railroad rails up to 100 meters in length using state-of-the-art technologies for steel rolling, hardening, straightening, finishing, and rail quality control and a wide range of other products with steady geometric section parameters and lower metal consumption due to its precision and thermal strengthening.

Financial Position

Non-GAAP financial measures. This press release includes financial information prepared in accordance with accounting principles generally accepted in the United States of America, or US GAAP, as well as other financial measures referred to as non-GAAP financial measures. The non-GAAP financial measures should be considered in addition to, but not as a substitute for, the information prepared in accordance with US GAAP.

Earnings Before Interest, Taxation, Depreciation and Amortization (EBITDA) and EBITDA margin. EBITDA as a percentage of our net revenues. Our EBITDA may not be similar to EBITDA measures of other companies is not a measurement under accounting principles generally accepted in the United States and should be considered in addition to, but not as a substitute for, the information contained in our consolidated income statement. We believe that EBITDA provides useful information to investors because it is an indicator of the strength and performance of our ongoing business operations, including our ability to fund discretionary spending such as capital expenditures, acquisitions and other investments and our ability to incur and service debt. While interest, depreciation and amortization are considered operating costs under generally accepted accounting principles, these expenses primarily represent the non-cash current period allocation of costs associated with long-lived assets acquired or constructed in prior periods. Our EBITDA calculation is commonly used as one of the bases for investors, analysts and credit rating agencies to evaluate and compare the periodic and future operating performance and value of companies within the metals and mining industry. EBITDA can be reconciled to our consolidated statements of operations as follows:
