NEWS RELEASE

SHAW COMMUNICATIONS SUPPORTS CRTC DETERMINATION TO AFFIRM EARLIER VOIP DECISION

CALGARY, AB (September 1, 2006) Shaw Communications announced today its support for the decision by the Canadian Radio-television and Telecommunications Commission (CRTC) to affirm its earlier ruling that VoIP (Voice over Internet Protocol) services offered as alternatives to traditional voice services should be governed by a common set of regulations. The CRTC's review of this issue followed an appeal of a 2005 decision to the Federal Cabinet by the incumbent telephone companies.

Today's decision by the CRTC clearly demonstrates that it is supportive and fully aligned with the Federal Government's desire to move away from regulation and towards reliance on market forces. Shaw supports the efforts of both the Government and the CRTC in this regard.

We have a regulatory framework in place that promotes real choice and benefits for consumers said Jim Shaw, CEO, Shaw Communications. Competition is beginning to take hold and this a direct result of the CRTC's framework. In conjunction with its VoIP decision, the CRTC also initiated a proceeding to re-examine one element of its deregulation framework. Shaw will participate actively in this proceeding, but considers that there has been no significant change in market circumstances or information to warrant this review or that would necessitate any changes to current framework.

We strongly support the CRTC's decision and the federal government's commitment to competition said Mr. Shaw. About Shaw Communications Inc.
