Introduction:

Himax Technologies, Inc. (“Himax”) is a fabless semiconductor solution provider dedicated to display imaging processing technologies. Himax designs, develops and markets semiconductors that are critical components in display technology; and its principal driver IC and module product families are:

- 1) Display driver IC – they are used primarily for any-sized thin film transistor-liquid crystal display (TFT-LCD) panels like mobile, desktop monitors, notebook computers and televisions,
- 2) Video processor IC – they are used primarily in TFT-LCD panels to process video image such as convert 2D to 3D pictures.
- 3) LCOS micro display model – they are PICO projectors.

- 4) CMOS IC – they are image sensors used in customer electronics such as digital camera to process and capture pictures.
- 5) Analog IC – they are used primarily to power IC chips and white Light-Emitting Diode (LED) driver.

The majority of these principal products sold by Himax contain Conflict Minerals. Based upon Himax's internal conflict mineral management mechanism covering the Reasonable Country of Origin Investigation with Due Diligence following the OECD Guidelines, the following conclusion has been reached:

Himax's principal driver IC and module products containing Conflict Minerals have sources that are not found to be DRC Conflict and Himax has considered in a good faith the above-mentioned products being "DRC Conflict Free".

Himax maintains a Conflict Minerals Policy that supports Conflict Free Sourcing. The link to this policy is included below:
