LEADERS NAMED

Post-merger senior management team names direct reports, effective when transaction closes

The post-merger senior management team has named the leaders who will report directly to them in the combined organization. These decisions will be effective after the transaction closes. Until then, the current organizational structure in both Weyerhaeuser and Plum Creek remains the same.

I'm excited about this group of outstanding leaders who represent a great mix of talent from both companies, says Doyle Simons, president and CEO. After the transaction closes, I look forward to working with this team to ensure a successful integration and bright future for the new Weyerhaeuser. Of course, these decisions also mean a number of leaders from both companies will not be part of the post-merger organization. I want to thank them for their leadership, dedication, and for all the contributions they've made. I wish each of them well in the future.

POST-MERGER LEADERSHIP TEAM

Below is organizational structure for the post-merger leadership team (download the PowerPoint version).

These decisions affect several leaders from both Weyerhaeuser and Plum Creek. Details about Plum Creek leaders will be shared with that organization. For Weyerhaeuser:

Doug Bowersock will continue as director of Human Resources for Timberlands until the transaction closes, and has agreed to stay on after that for an extended period to help with the broader transition.

Marc Cannon, currently interim leader for Columbia Timberlands, will become operations and safety manager in the Columbia Timberlands organization after the transaction closes, reporting to Ryan Beaver.

Christine Dean will continue as vice president of Timberlands Technology until the transaction closes, and then stay on for a transition period before retiring later this year.

John Enlow, current vice president of Southern Timberlands, is leaving Weyerhaeuser to pursue other opportunities.

David Godwin will continue as vice president of Minerals and Energy Products until the transaction closes, and then stay on for another six months to help with the transition before retiring later this year.

Jud Jackson will continue as assistant general counsel reporting to Devin Stockfish until the transaction closes, after which he will report to Paul Leuzzi.

Cassie Phillips will continue as vice president, Sustainable Forestry, until the transaction closes, and then stay on for a transition period before retiring later this year.

Tom Smith will continue as vice president of Tax until the transaction closes and then stay on for a transition period before retiring later this year.

Chris Van Liew will continue as chief information officer until the transaction closes, stay on for a transition period, and then leave the company to pursue other opportunities.

As previously announced, Patty Bedient intends to retire later this year and once the transaction closes, she will step down as executive vice president and chief financial officer for Weyerhaeuser. Cathy Slater will continue to be senior vice president of Cellulose Fibers throughout the strategic review process for that business.

NEXT STEPS FOR PEOPLE DECISIONS

These post-merger leaders will now begin to make decisions about who will fill positions on their teams after closing. This process will move quickly for teams that are small or for which integration is straightforward. For teams that are larger or more complex, it may take longer for decisions to be finalized. The post-merger leadership team is committed to moving as quickly as possible to evaluate talent from both companies, make the right decisions for the combined organization, and communicate those decisions to their teams as they are made.
