Item 8.01 Other Events

We are continuing to review our revenue recognition policies and procedures in cooperation with the previously reported investigation by the SEC. We have concluded that the following items, which we determined are immaterial, were recorded in the incorrect period and we are making appropriate adjustments to our previously filed financial statements.

For product sales, our policy is to record sales when a firm sales agreement is in place, delivery has occurred and collectibility of the fixed or determinable sales price is reasonably assured. Consistent with this policy, in certain contracts, we recognize revenue upon shipment if, among other things, risk of loss for damage in transit has been transferred to the customer. In such contracts, when this risk is not transferred either as a matter of contract or practice, sales cannot be recorded until the product reaches the customer. We have determined that, for certain product sales, principally in our Healthcare, Infrastructure and Industrial segments, we recorded revenues upon shipment before we transferred risks of transit loss. Although the terms for these sales often provided for transfer of the risk of transit loss upon shipment, because we self-insured the risk on the first $30 million of transit losses per year, we effectively retained risk of transit loss for sales that were Cost Insurance Freight or Cost Insurance Paid. At other times, our sales documents contained conflicting terms that resulted in our retaining transit risk until delivery. Further, our businesses, especially Healthcare, had a practice, for the customer's benefit, of repairing or replacing at our expense essentially all products damaged or lost in transit even when we were not obligated to do so.<sup>1</sup> These items, together with the impact of several matters in the Rail and the Water businesses,<sup>2</sup> are referred to in the accompanying schedules as "Cut-off."

Separately, our GE Aviation business has long-term agreements to provide product repair and maintenance services on GE-manufactured aircraft engines. Under these contracts, we retain parts removed during repair and maintenance procedures performed, refurbish those parts and reuse or resell them. To the extent retained parts have value, our total maintenance contract costs are reduced. In estimating such costs, our accounting procedures were incorrect for about four years with respect to the timing and amount of credits for the used parts. We credited the estimated contract costs for the full future selling price of the refurbished parts less costs of repair rather than the fair value of the parts before refurbishment. Gross contract margin and associated revenues on the refurbished parts were recognized before the parts were sold. In addition, when the refurbished parts were ultimately sold or used, proceeds were accounted for as reductions of incurred contract costs, resulting in reduction of associated contract revenues, which had been overstated. The retained parts should have been accounted for earlier as reductions of incurred costs when the engine repair or maintenance procedures were performed, and should subsequently have been accounted for independently of the contracts based on the fair values of retained parts. Effects accumulated over the four-year period this procedure was in place, resulting in an overestimate of contract profitability arising from an underestimate of costs, an overestimate of progress towards contract completion and consequently an overstatement of revenue. This item is referred to in the accompanying schedules as "Contract cost."

For the third quarter of 2007, we revised our accounting procedures to correct the accounting for these items. In addition, as previously reported, we have already implemented a number of remedial actions and internal control enhancements and we are continuing to evaluate and improve our internal control over financial reporting with respect to our revenue recognition policies and procedures.

<sup>1</sup> For context, the cost of these concessionary repairs or replacements is small relative to the affected revenues. For example, in the first three quarters of 2007, Healthcare provided repairs or replacements amounting to less than $10 million, less than 0.1% of total segment sales.

<sup>2</sup> The most significant of these adjustments related to the 2000-2003 Rail transactions that, as previously disclosed, accelerated revenue by one quarter.

Our internal review and the SEC investigation are continuing and we will address any additional issues as may be appropriate. Our management and audit committee continue to monitor the review closely, with the assistance of outside experts, and to discuss any issues that arise with the SEC staff as appropriate as part of our ongoing cooperation with the SEC investigation.

To assist in understanding the effects of these immaterial items, we set forth below the following summary adjusted data, which will also be disclosed in our future Exchange Act reports:

- Statement of Financial Position at December 31, 2005, December 31, 2006 and June 30, 2007;
- Statement of Earnings for the years ended December 31, 2003, December 31, 2004, December 31, 2005 and December 31, 2006 and for each of the quarters ended March 31, 2006, June 30, 2006, September 30, 2006, December 31, 2006, March 31, 2007 and June 30, 2007; and
- Summary of the operating effect of the above items on each of our Infrastructure, Healthcare and Industrial segments and our Aviation, Energy and Consumer and Industrial sub-segments for the same periods.

The summary adjusted data treat our Plastics, Advanced Materials, U.S. mortgage business (WMC) and Japan personal loan business (Lake) as discontinued operations for all periods, and exclude immaterial end of 2006 audit differences that were recorded in the first quarter of 2007.
