- Staff functions consolidated at BCE and Bell

MONTREAL, May 7 /CNW Telbec/ - Michael Sabia, Chief Executive Officer of Bell Canada and BCE Inc., today announced a new business structure that simplifies Bell's operations by creating business divisions that reflect the three major customer segments it serves and integrates the corporate functions of BCE and Bell.

"Our goals are clear - to differentiate ourselves in the market place by building a Bell Canada that is a powerhouse of performance, product and service innovation, is simple to deal with, and has the highest productivity in the industry," said Mr. Sabia. "That's how we're going to win in a highly competitive market. That's how we're going to bring value to our customers and earn the right to be their communications supplier of choice."

Effective June 1st, Bell Canada will create three customer segments to replace its current structure:

- The Consumer Markets Group will include Bell's residential wireline service, its Mobility services, its ExpressVu satellite T.V. service, its Sympatico Internet services and its retail operations.
- The Small and Medium Business Division creates a unit which is totally dedicated to this customer segment.
- The Enterprise Division will focus on large business customers, governments and institutions.

The Consumer Markets Group will be led by Pierre Blouin, Group President. The Business Markets Group will be led by John Sheridan, Group President and will include Karen Sheriff, President, Small and Medium Business and Isabelle Courville, President, Enterprise.

(Editor's Note: For further information on the new organization, including an organizational chart, go to www.bce.ca/en/announcement .)

"Our customers want sophisticated, integrated solutions from a company that has leading-edge products and services, is reliable and is simple to deal with," said Mr. Sabia. "Our new structure moves us in this direction. It will facilitate our ability to provide customers a full range of communications services through a single point of contact."

The company will carefully transition to this new structure in the coming weeks in order to ensure there is no impact on customers or service levels. Business customers will, for the most part, continue to be served by their regular sales representatives.

Mr. Sabia went on to say that Bell will move towards taking a more integrated approach to managing its IS/IT, Technology, Network Operations and Productivity Initiatives. "We must continue to raise the bar on our customer services levels and our productivity accomplishments. We will achieve better performance in these areas by aligning all of our technological resources around a clear business purpose."

The integration of functions between BCE and Bell will move BCE closer to the operations and challenges of its core asset. It will also serve to simplify BCE's structure, helping investors better understand the company's focus going forward.

"A year ago we embarked on a plan to bring greater focus to the organization and simplify Bell. We addressed the uncertainties BCE was facing. We regained full control of Bell Canada. We strengthened the balance sheet. We implemented financial discipline. We are now implementing our plans to simplify Bell Canada to build stronger relationships with our 25 million customer connections. Our attention is on our core operations at Bell Canada and our intent is nothing short of making a strong, Canadian Bell Canada the best communications company in North America," concluded Mr. Sabia.
