British Telecommunications PLC and CGI sign partnership agreement bringing single window e-government solutions to the UK Local Authority Market
- Multi billion pound market size

London, England, October 17, 2001 - British Telecommunications PLC (BT) and CGI Group Inc. (CGI) (NYSE: GIB; TSE: GIB.A), today announced the signing of a partnership agreement whereby BT has selected CGI to be its development partner as it offers "single-window" e-government service delivery solutions to Local Authorities in Scotland, England and Wales. All Local Authorities in the United Kingdom have been challenged by the UK Central Government to provide all of their services to citizens "on-line" by the year 2005, offering anywhere, anytime access to government services. The UK Local Authority Government "on-line" market is a multi-billion pound market.

BT will prime in the partnership through BT Retail, with CGI providing project management, functional and technical architecture, systems integration, solutions and applications development as well as consulting. By partnering with CGI, BT brings to the Local Authorities the most advanced architectures in the world, providing multi-channelled, one-stop-shop government service delivery known as "single-window". The Province of New Brunswick has been an acknowledged leader in changing the way governments interact with citizens through the innovative use of technology, as pioneered over the past 10 years by its delivery agency Service New Brunswick. CGI is Service New Brunswick's primary contractor and architect. CGI is also providing its services to the Canadian Federal Government's Secure Channel project and the Province of Ontario's on-line service delivery project. As well, CGI's IT outsourcing experience will help BT to deliver innovative implementation models that establish enhanced public services leading to a more integrated approach to service delivery and public administration.

According to a recent study, Canada was selected as the world leader in electronic government initiatives in creating a citizen-centric focus as opposed to a government department approach. In Canada, CGI has distinguished itself as a leader in helping governments meet their objectives of providing better service by creating a secure "single-window" for citizen to government services.

Pierre Danon, chief executive officer, BT Retail said, "BT Retail is committed to working with world class partners to deliver effective tailored solutions for our customers. We are delighted to link up with such an exciting and highly respected partner as CGI and this bodes well for our partnerships with local authorities."

"The combined experience and expertise of BT Retail and CGI will provide significant benefit to local authorities and assist them in reaching e-government targets. We understand the benefits of learning from initiatives outside the UK and we believe CGI is an ideal partner to strengthen our existing knowledge and success in the Local Government sector."

Michael Roach, president, Canada and Europe, CGI said, "Our Canadian expertise will be adopted in the UK to be part of what we believe to be the most comprehensive e-government initiative in the World. BT is an outstanding partner with the knowledge and breadth to help their customers meet the challenges set by the Central Government of the UK. Around the world, all governments have the same mandate and we feel confident that we have the vehicles, government know-how, professionals and IT acumen to help them meet their needs."

A worldwide initiative

Governments everywhere are challenging their organizations to adopt "on-line" channels as a catalyst for change. The goal of these initiatives is to provide better service with operating savings, and change the way governments do business.

BT's search for "best-of-breed" models from around the world to bring to the UK, led them to the Service New Brunswick (SNB) approach, in the Province of New Brunswick Canada, and to its functional and technical architects CGI. Service New Brunswick not only provides one-stop-shopping for 120 different services on behalf of 11 Government Departments, but also provides access to transactions for some Municipal Governments as well as linkages to the Canadian Federal Government in a "joined up" government model.

A Gartner Group case study released in August 2001 entitled Architecture of the Future: Service New Brunswick, showcased the SNB-CGI model. To learn more, please visit www.cgi.ca.

The model

The experiences of both companies has been in integrating not only traditional over-the-counter government service delivery and new electronic service delivery channels, but also front office and back office processes and functionality across multiple departments thus providing single-window access for the citizen regardless of channel or service request. CGI's approach has resulted in the deployment of proven, scalable solutions providing a functional and technical architecture that enables single-window, multi-channeled access.

About British Telecommunications PLC

Following the introduction of challenging government targets a few years ago a number of groundbreaking partnerships have been developed with innovative local authorities taking radical steps. BT is at the centre of many of these partnerships, a fact supported by recent Kable research findings placing BT as the emerging number one partner in local government.

Not only has BT experienced the culture and organisational change facing local authorities but it can also provide the expertise and solutions needed to make the transition required of the modernising government agenda. BT has excelled in many of the areas local government is now looking to change - customer service, flexible working, internal communications, procurement, knowledge sharing, human resources and property management - making it an ideal partner for local government.
