ELBIT SYSTEMS' SUBSIDIARY, THE ELISRA GROUP, AWARDED AN APPROXIMATELY US$8 MILLION CONTRACT TO SUPPLY PERSONNEL SURVIVAL RADIOS TO THE GERMAN AIR FORCE

Haifa, Israel, September 10, 2006 Elbit Systems Ltd. (NASDAQ Global Select Market: ESLT) announced that Tadiran Spectralink Ltd. (Spectralink), a member of the Elisra Group, won a contract for supply of the advanced PRS-434G/SV Personal Survival Radio (PSR) to the German Air Force. The current order, for approximately US$8 million, is anticipated to result in follow-on orders for additional quantities of the PSR, intended for other branches of the German military, plus a comprehensive Integrated Logistics Support package. Other European countries expected to follow suit.

The PRC-434G/SV was developed by Spectralink to meet the needs and requirements of the German Armed Forces and according to specifications established by the German Air Force. With its exclusive features, plus reduced weight and volume, this is the smartest and smallest PSR currently available in its class.

Spectralink's President and CEO, Mr. Itzhak Beni, said that this order further strengthens Spectralink's already firm position as a prime supplier of PR/SAR systems to modern armed forces throughout the world. He stated that the company is in a position to offer customers in Europe and elsewhere advanced combat and non-combat PR/SAR systems, enabling users to choose from among a large variety of models and configurations. One of the advantages of Spectralink's advanced PR/SAR technology, said Beni, is that with our SDR (Software Defined Radio) technology we facilitate tailoring solutions to each customer's specific requirements.
