PepsiCo Proposal to Acquire PBG/PAS
Key Messages/Talking Points/Q&A

- PepsiCo has proposed to acquire all of the outstanding shares it does not already own of both The Pepsi Bottling Group and PepsiAmericas. We're working to strategically reshape PepsiCo's North America Beverages business – and we're committed to doing it collaboratively and constructively.
- Combining our two largest bottlers would strengthen the Pepsi-Cola system in many ways, creating significant manufacturing and distribution synergies, performance efficiencies and cost savings.
- With overlapping costs and scale efficiencies, we're talking about synergies of more than $200 million per year, including a fully integrated supply chain and go-to-market business model.
- This integrated entity would include 80% of total PepsiCo beverage volume in North America, including both DSD and warehouse systems.
 - We'd continue to use existing JACT and committee structures to ensure smooth, seamless operations.
- This is a great chance to build competitive advantage through increased collaboration with and among our bottling partners. Accordingly, it's a great chance to confront our challenges and drive mutually profitable growth, taking our LRB business to a whole new level.
- We have to do everything we can to create the most effective, most efficient beverage system possible. We're convinced the current and future needs of our consumers and customers would be better served with PepsiCo playing a more active role in the bottling business.

What does this mean to your third anchor bottler, PBV?

This transaction would involve only PBG and PAS. PBV would be unaffected.

Will PepsiCo also be buying the independents?

Again, this is about the opportunity to combine our two largest anchor bottlers – PBG and PAS. We'll continue to work with our independent bottlers to take advantage of manufacturing and distribution efficiencies, and they'll continue to make their own important contributions to our system.
